

Dear FCC, I am a long distance truck driver and rely on accurate weather and traffic conditions to plan my day. Xmradio's weather and traffic stations are a very big help to me. I can go to the city that I need to find out info for in advance. I don't have to wait until I get within range of a particular station. I don't have to know what station to turn to in a particular city because I have an xm station guide. This is a good service and is beneficial to many people. I also believe that it is a freedom of speech right. These local stations are afraid that they will lose some of their sponsorship. I pay for my xm radio. I shouldn't have to worry about someone else telling me what I can listen to on it. Thank you. Sincerely Richard J. Bath
